RESPECTING CONFIDENTIALITY IN WRITTEN COURSE ASSIGNMENTS
A salient issue for students during practice is respecting the confidentiality of clients, client records and activities that occur while in field. These can include interactions with agency staff and the student’s field instructor. Consequently, it is expected that students adhere to the NASW Code of Ethics in regards professional and ethical conduct. Students are to respect client and agency confidentiality in their written course assignments by refraining from the use of actual names or identifying information in regard to their clients, agency, and agency staff member or field instructor. Rather, students are to utilize non-identifying descriptors when referring to a client, staff member, field instructor or agency.

   Introduction
   Advocacy is an essential skill for all social workers to help advance social and economic justice for our clients and social service programs. Advocating occurs at both micro and macro levels with the aim of eliminating or decreasing barriers for opportunities and the aim of creating opportunities for marginalized and oppressed people. Advocating can be viewed on a continuum from can be helping a client secure needed services or goods, changing agency policies, to changing local, regional or national policies. Advocating can take the form of speaking with others on behalf of a client in a collaborative empowering process to exercising political or organizational influence or through community organizing.

   Instructions
   Students will select an advocacy they did for a client or on behalf of clients or students may select an advocacy process they may wish to impellent in the future at their agency or on behalf of their agency’s clients and programs. Students will need to have their advocacy topic approved by the instructor. Please follow the directions as outlined below.

1. Prepare a 20-25 minute presentation about your advocacy.
2. Include a description of your advocacy efforts, the collaborative partners, as well as your rationale.
3. Describe the advocacy process and the achieved outcome and or the intended outcome or unintended outcome.
4. Analyze and describe any barriers to implementing your advocacy.
5. Provide two critical thinking kinds of questions as a basis for class discussion.

4. Professional Self Care workshop an Assignment
   This assignment will prepare the student for identification of unhelpful habits and then establishing helpful strategies in dealing with stressors associated with the practice of social work. We will make the differentiation between routine self care and professional self care. We will read materials, engage in class discussion, and finally the student will write a paper describing their professional self care. Details and specifics about the workshop and assignment will be given later. The end product will be a written paper on the student’s professional self care plan and strategies.
