Subject: Electronic Repository to share teaching templates and resources

Dear colleagues,

By this time, if you are like me, you are overwhelmed by all the emails. I am sorry to be one more email, but I created a OneDrive folder available at this link: ☐ Going Online Quickly - Resources & Templates. In the folder, I have uploaded online resources and templates. You will find a "Week at a Glance" PowerPoint slide that I am using to orient my students to our new normal; my updated syllabus; and some resources related to tracking student small group work. Feel free to use these resources as a template for your own courses if you find them helpful. Now is not the time to reinvent the wheel, so feel free to plug and play your own information into the "Week at a Glance" and also to copy any pertinent information related to online instruction from my syllabus (i.e., respectful communication in the online learning space, etc.).

Anyone else who wants to share resources, please upload to the files to the folder above so we can help one another. (Email me directly if the link doesn't work, but I already tested it with another faculty, so it should be good to go).

Sincerely,

Rebecca Wells, MSW, MPH, PhD
